

New services!

Words Worth Reading Ltd have added two new services to their repertoire. March has seen the launch of a new mentoring service for writers, offering the opportunity to be mentored by a published author who has personally experienced the difficulties that are associated with producing a first class manuscript that publishers will want to accept. The second service is support with Team Building which can be tailored to specific needs. Through this service we now offer creative writing team building days and ½ days, to help you build team morale, team working and creativity across your organisation. Business News

The new Connecting for Health's Information Governance toolkit is under development and should be finalised by June. There is generally a requirement for all companies that work with Public Sector organisations to complete this, so why not take a look at www.connectingforhealth.nhs.uk

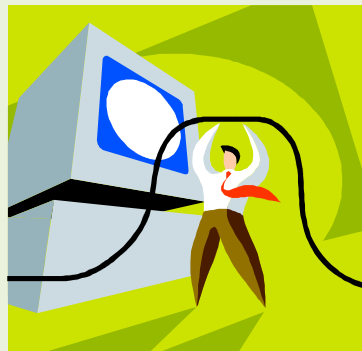

Students

Easter brings with the end of term and for some students the end of their university course, so now is a good time to check out our dissertation submission services.
